Our mission is to build a safe environment for students to work toward solutions that address problems of social inequality, such as wealth and income inequality, poverty, racial, economic and gender disparities.

We do this by...

1. Fostering knowledge-sharing by bringing together students, scholars and activists who are researching and working on all dimensions of inequality
2. Advocating for greater inclusion of income disparity, poverty, racial divides and other dimensions of inequality in public policy and social science curriculum.
3. Promoting community-building and enhancing organizational efforts for social, economic and racial justice through active partnership with other student organizations
4. Stimulating civic and political engagement by seeking volunteer and political action opportunities

As a new organization, RISE plans to focus our efforts on building awareness and forging partnerships with other organizations throughout the Columbia University network, both at the graduate and undergraduate level. We believe by becoming a member of the Interschool Governing Board, RISE will be able to expand its reach and capacity to collaborate with more organizations in efforts to explore the intersectionality of economic and social injustice. Furthermore, through hosting events like our RISE Inequality Speaker Series--bringing together prominent and interdisciplinary speakers, to discuss diverse issues of inequality--we hope to both further scholarship in this field and to engage students in constructive conversations that will equip them with the sensibility and self-awareness necessary to navigate diverse spaces and divergent opinions in their future careers.

Finally, in addition to working with students and faculty at SIPA and the School of Social Work—with opportunity of expansion to other departments such as Sociology and Political Science--we intend to collaborate with other departments and Institutes at Columbia on this inherently interdisciplinary subject. This may include: the Institute for Social and Economic Policy Research, the Center for the Study of Ethnicity and Race, the Center for the Study of Wealth and Inequality, the Institute for Research in African-American Studies and the Center for the Study of Social Difference, among others.
